The screenshot displays the NOSCO application interface. At the top, a dark navigation bar contains the NOSCO logo, menu items for Activity, Ideas, and Channels, a search bar for ideas, and a user profile dropdown for 'You'. The main content area is divided into three sections. On the left is a user profile for Dale Cooper, featuring a circular profile picture, a 'Create idea' button, and statistics for posts (175), liked posts (369), favorites (697), and channels followed (23). The middle section highlights a 'Featured Channel' titled 'Innovation Challenge' with a background image of a person on a snowy mountain peak. The challenge description states it is an 'Idea Submission Stage' running for the next 3 months. Below the description are icons for 323 ideas, 238 participants, and 50 days remaining, along with another 'Create idea' button. The bottom section, titled 'Channels', includes a search bar and a list of channels: 'Bugs' with 12 items and 'New Ideas' with 3 items.

Being digital, collaborative and inclusive

When you create a channel for ideas you define a workflow for this channel. You decide, who can submit, who should evaluate and who eventually choose to provide “seed funding” to the best ideas.

Right Stakeholders

Asking the right internal stakeholders and sponsors for screening ideas brings the ideas one step closer to being executed.

We often design a process, where idea authors can look for idea team members, on the platform, so real cross organisational teams can develop.

Like, follow and comment

Asking people to submit ideas or like, follow and comment on ideas, enables a digital online discussion of “what brings the business forward.”

I'm not a system person but I think I'm in love with this one. It is intuitive, easy and great to be able to see other peoples response.
